

Crazy Cleaners

Ladies and gentlemen, turn your attention to the center ring to see a pair of squeegee-brandishing, ledge-walking, window-cleaning clowns. This dumb-namic duo will take your breath away with their death-defying feats, all performed while perched upon a pint-sized precipice, forty feet above the lobby of a fancy hotel.

As you can imagine, great skill is required to maintain balance while traversing from ledge to ledge, and even more skill is needed to squeegee while standing on the top step of the ladder. But alas, the amount of skill one possesses is not necessarily proportionate to one's intelligence level. In truth, anyone can see these idiots are inches from eternity, a mere wobble away from kingdom come.

Folks, if you've got a dangerous job like this to do, use risk management and a little common sense to do the job safely. Otherwise your commitment to getting the job done could land you in a casket.

